WILL FERRELL RIDES INTO FRAME DRESSED IN ROYAL GARMENTS, ATOP A NOBLE STEED.

WF: Hello, I'm King Edward the First of England. 700 years ago, I banned the burning of coal in my home country. Not because I'm a good guy, but because it's freaking idiotic. My subjects who breathed coal's dragony breath were puking blood on my castle gates - and if you know about castle gate maintenance, it's a problem. You can't just Shout It Out. Yet I've been told by my sorcerers that, centuries later, you in the future are still burning coal. Really??? What is wrong with you people! Were you smoking the marijuana during history class? Have you not read the reports of your wizards about the warming globe and the many health problems coal inflicts upon your infants? You, who have winged chariots that soar through the air, like enchanted falcons. Your waste pots flush like magic waterfalls of poop removal. Yet you continue to burn ashen rocks extracted from the ground? Like cave people? It's depressing. I can't tell you how [BLEEPED UP] this makes me feel.

WILL TEARS OFF THE LAPEL MICROPHONE CLIPPED TO HIS CRIMSON ROBE. CREW MEMBERS ENTER FRAME AND TRY TO PERSUADE HIM TO CONTINUE.

WF (off mic): No, [BLEEP] it, they are morons. Let them burn. And I'm not cleaning up any vomit.

TAG: THOSE WHO DON'T LEARN FROM HISTORY ARE DOOMED TO REPEAT IT.

LET'S MOVE BEYOND COAL.
